Had the local consumer contracted for his coal Saturday it would have cost him $6.00 per ton. The acconce became effective yesterday by the edict of the Cost Trust. The coal dealers say that they are not to bisme for the high prices. The prices are set for them by the trust, and they are obliged to sell, they declare, at the figures given. He expected that coal would bring $7.00 per ton before the end of the The advance, he said, was to have been ordered yesterday, but for some reason it was not made, and Washington was given a new lease on its pocketbooks which will, however, not continue indefinitely.

September 2 was the date set by the trust, it is understood, for a general advancement in coal prices all along the line. That the advance was not made is not regarded as having been due to the generosity of the coal magnetes. Some other motive is back of the delay in raising the value of the fuels, known to the covetous trust, even though the cause is beyond the comprehension of the layman. According to this dealer coal will be higher this winter than ever before for many years.

According to this dealer coal will be higher this winter than ever before for many years.

Another large dealer took a more serious view of the coal situation. "God knows that the price of coal is high enough aircady, said he yesterday morning, and I don't know what the result will be if the price continues to rise." Curiously enough, this dealer was in apparent ignorance of the fact that there is in existence such a thing as a coal trust. According to his statement he did not know where the cause of the prevailing high prices and the prospect of a further increase could be located.

Still another dealer said that the price of coal would probably advance within a day or two at least 5 cents, making the price if per ton. He knew of the existence of the Coal Trust, and deplored the fact that such high prices prevail. There is plenty of coal in the city, he said, although the railroads are having some difficulty in shipping, owing to the scarcity of cars.

The indications are that there is a coal of cars.

The indications are that there is a coal trust of considerable proportions in Wash-lagfon. The prices for the fuel are the same at all of the large coal yards, showing that they are regulated from some cher source than the dealers themselves.

It is understood that there are a few dealers in the city who belong to the Coal Trust, who sell coal quietly at prices considerably less than $6.75 per ton. One dealer in the southeast is selling coal, and has been for some time, according to a statement made yesterday, at about $6.25

In the event that coal peros advance during this winter the burden of the increase will fall upon the poor of the city, who is the purchaser of small quantities and unable to secure concessions, made sub rosa, to larger consumers.

OUTING OF THE TOILERS.

Extensive Observance of the Day by Organized Labor.

Excursions to Glen Echo, Marshall Hall, and Other Resorts-Workmen Celebrate in Large Numbers-Sports and Other Entertainments.

The members of organized labor in the District turned out in thousands yester-day to celebrate Labor Day, the workingman's national holiday. At an early hour every theroughfare in the city was crowded with workmen, freed for the day from their labors, with the members of their families and friends, wending their ways to some one of the pleasure resorts in the suburbs to spend the day in recreation and amusement. Work in nearly every branch of local industry was sus-pended for the day.

Mammoth picnic outings were organized by the three local central labor bodies. The Knights of Labor, under the auspices f District Assembly No. 66, Knights of Labor, spent the day at historic Marshall Hall in regular holiday fashion, and sel-dom has any outing been spent more pleasantly. The trades unionists, under the auspices of the Central Labor Union, spent the occasion at Gien Echo with their triends. The members of the or-ganizations addiated with the Building Trades Council also spent the day picnick-ing down the Potomac, and the builders and their guests had a delightful time. During the last three months commit-tees appointed by the three central bodies have been hard at work preparing for the celebration of the day. Nothing has been left undone which would tend to the comfort, pleasure, and entertalnment of the members of organized labor, their families and friends. The programmes of amusements scheduled to take place at the various outings were sufficient to guarantee that those who participated in the observance of Labor Day with the wageearners of the District would enjoy the That the members of organized labor in Washington have the friendship of the public was demonstrated by the great outpouring of pleasure seekers yesterday to the different resorts where the central bodies celebrated the day. Every steamer scheduled to make trips to the river resorts where the Knights of Labor and the Building Trades Council held their outlings was crowded to the gunwales. Every street car which went to Glen Echo was also fifted to standing room.

This has been the most successful celebration of the workingman's national holiday which was ever held in the Dis-trict. The toilers and their friends went to the outing places at early hours and so agreeable were the various entertainments provided that the great majority of the excursionists did not return to the city until the last boat or car left the

There was an immense crowd at Glen Echo. A barbecued steer was served in splendid style on the grounds, and when the exercises were formally opened by James L. Feeney, President of the Cen-tral Labor Union, with an address of welcome in the amphitheatre the building was packed to standing room. The address of Mr. Feeney was received with flattering applause. He said in part:

"Ladies and gentlemen, and friends of labor: I desire to express to the large audience present on behalf of the Central Lakor Union of the District of Columbia, our cordial greeting and to bid you welcome to our Labor Day onting.

"Labor Day in the District of Columbia was declared a legal holiday by act of a Congress and the bill was signed by the President on June 2. 1841. We celebrated the event on the first Monday in September of that year by a large parade, and since then we have looked forward to the day as one of rest or recreation and pleasure for the organized workers of our City.

"Labor Day is now a legal holiday in thirty-six States, and in every State and Territory of our Union it is celebrated by organized labor in street parades, pictures, mass meetings or river excursions. It is the day that we are called on to celebrate, as it has been instituted in our hunor and it affords us an opportunity to rekindle the enthusiasm in our brothers who are worn and weary in labor's struggles for right and justice. It is also that day for congratulation on the continuous growth of new unions and the largely increased membership in all our locals; therefore we sheald all commemorate the day in a worthy animner and to impress upon the organized as well as the unorganized workers the necessity of more extensive organization so that we can cope effectively with the combinations. From the armonian of the District of Columbia. Up to 1856 the Rnights of Labor Assemblies predominated in the city, and no trade union central body existed. The local Federation of Labor which resulted in the suning of a call for all trade unions to send delegrates to form a central Labor Union. A preliminary on membership, A great deal of dissatisfaction was soon engendered among the trade unions to send delegrates to form a central Labor Union, of a call for all trade unions and cannot of organizations were represented and the Central Labor Union of the District of Columbia. We neet every Monday eve labor unions and cause dissensions, we are united for the sole purpose of aiding and assisting each other, and the grievance of one organization concerns us all.

"We endeavor to settle all grievances and difficulities that are brought to our attention amicably and to the entire satisfaction of both parties concerned. We detest strikes and boycotts and never resort to them until every other means within our power have become exhausted, and we are compelled to assert our rights and seek what is justly due. We strive to create a healthy public opinion for the great cause for which we stand, and if at any time an unjust strike is called or a boycott levied we endeavor to amend and repair the loss that the error has caused.

"The Central Labor Union never initiates or places a boycott on any firm or employer. We are not an erganization of individuals, but an organization of individuals, but an organization of individuals, but an organization of individuals agreement and the firm or employer on the unfair list, and the matter is then hid before the central body and its endorsement asked, but before such a request is granted our grievance committee takes the matter up, and I am pleased to say that we settle over 30 per cent of the difficulties that are brought to our attention. When our committee fails to adjust the matter, and we find that the employer is antagonistic to our interests we resort to the only weapon that labor commands and the name of the employer or firm is placed on the unfair list and loses the natronage of organized labor and the friends of labor.

"We regret very much that we have to resort to such methods, but we claim the right to refrain from patronizing any firm whose action denotes that they do not want our patronage.

"Labor unions have thriven and grown in the face of opposition; they have attained for workingmen material advantages that have developed powerful sympathies among them; they have been taught the lesson of self-

It was estimated last night by officials of the Building Trades Council that about 5,000 people took advantage of the holiday and the fine weather and went down the river to participate in the excellent programme of amusements which had been prepared by the Labor Day committees. Those in charge of the celebration had used every effort to make the occasion a notable one.

With this in view an excellent programme of athletic field games had been arranged. The first feature of the entertainment was a game of basebalt between teams representing the tinners' and painters' organizations. The nines were composed of the following named players: Tinners-A., Burns, G. Keating, L. Bradier, W. Hopper, W. House, B. Blanix, C. Watson, H. Winkleman, and C. Cooper. Painters-Charles M. Gates, Walter Berry, George Glasgow, John Leurch, John Guinan, Hagh J. Robb, Buck Creighton, Perry Quantrill, and James Corbett. The game was vigarously contested by both sides, but the honors went with the tinners. The final score was 8 to 7 in their favor. John Barkman umpired the contest.

sides, but the inhal score was 8 to 7 in their favor. John Barkman umpired the contest.

There were a number of other events, including an egg race, a potato race, foot races for men and boys, greased pole climbing, and wheelbarrow races for lades. Every feature of the programme was interesting as well as amusing, and was carried out most successfully.

The celebration was in charge of the following committees: General Committees: General Committees: General Committees: General Committees: General Committee-Henry L. Streb. Tinners; J. E. The general and sub-committees were assisted by Messrs, McEuen, Desmond, Cooper, Casey, Breen, Gainer, Wheeler, Frey, Shea, and Chisholm.

More than 2,500 Kaights of Labor, with their friends and families, yesterday invaded the spacious lawns at Marshall Hall, on the occasion of the Labor Day excursion given by the local district of that order of toilers. Despite the threatening weather merry-making continued until the departure of the last boat returning to the city. Fleid and other contests of different descriptions were provided for the entertainment of the workingmen and their guests, and the efforts of the contestants in the games called for enthusiastic approval from the many hundred spectators. Those who journeyed down the historic Potomac under the auspices of District Assembly No. 66, Knights of Labor, celebrated the labor-ingman's national hollday in so fitting a manner that the occasion will long remain a memorable one to those who shared the hospitality, Despite the fact that two of the three organizations in the city were hold-
